

AtliQ Hotel Performance Report (May 2022 - July 2022) - Revenue & Pricing Analysis

Luxury drove $1.64bn, but July's falling RevPAR amid stable occupancy and cancellation loss reveals rate cuts masking weakening demand. Seasons worsens the outlook: highest ADR, lowest satisfaction, weakest occupancy; demanding immediate intervention.

Luxury drives revenue. Seasons ($64M) severely underperforms peers despite uniform 25% cancellation across all properties

Blu leads satisfaction despite mid-tier revenue. Seasons underperforms with low revenue and ratings

Revenue fell $74M from May to July while cancellation loss held at 15%. Weakening demand is the driver, not cancellations

AtliQ Hotel Performance Report (May 2022 - July 2022) - Occupancy, Satisfaction & RevPAR Efficiency

Occupancy is leisure-driven and stable, yet Seasons' pricing crisis and Blu and City's underpricing signal that RevPAR optimisation, not occupancy, is the key growth lever

All properties are weekend-driven demand. Higher-rated properties are more occupied, linking satisfaction to demand

Weekend Occupancy Weekday Occupancy Average Rating

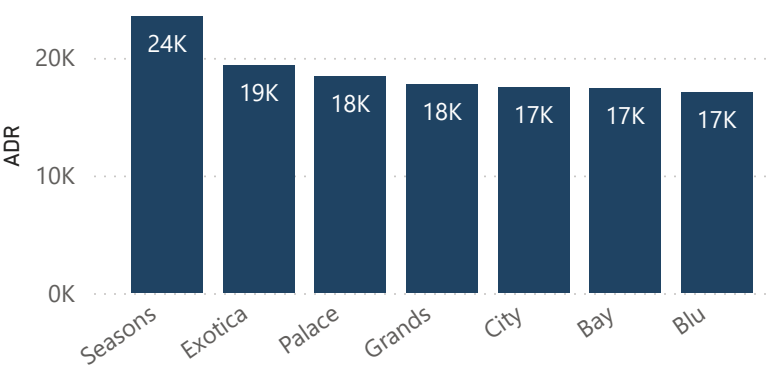

Palace and Blu lead efficiency. Seasons' premium pricing drives away demand, Grands struggles on both occupancy and RevPAR

category Business Luxury

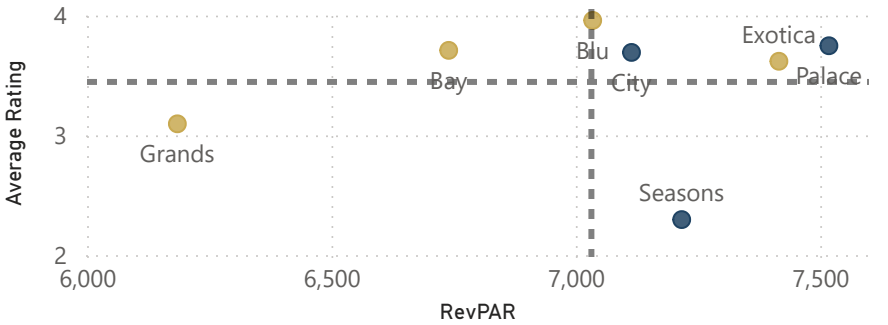

Seasons charges highest ADR despite lowest rating; lead to underperformed occupancy and revenue

Seasons' high RevPAR confirms guests pay premium for poor experience. Blu and City underpriced relative to satisfaction, signalling revenue upside

AtliQ Hotel Performance Report (May 2022 - July 2022) - Booking Channels, Demand Patterns & Cancellation Behaviour

Bookings spread across 7+ platforms. Demand fell 13% in July and shifted from weekend to weekday. Cancellation rate unchanged at ~25% across all platforms, cities, properties and months, pointing to structural policy failure and uncommitted customer base, not seasonal or channel-specific behaviour.
